STEVENTON

Jane Austen's Birthplace

Richard Tanner

Mrs Mary Fagan,
The Lord-Lieutenant of Hampshire

Following Richard Tanner's writing about North Waltham, I am delighted that he has now researched and written a book about Steventon.

Steventon will always be known throughout the world as the home of Jane Austen. The lanes around the village remind one so much of Jane. It is easy to imagine her visiting the Digweed family at Steventon Manor or how, on her many walks to Deane and Ashe, she must surely have drawn inspiration from this Hampshire countryside, much of which remains the same today.

This charming book illustrates that there is life after Jane Austen for Steventon and Richard recalls Steventon's history with great care. It is indeed a remarkable social account of one very special village in Hampshire.
